Ehud shalom,
Andy and I are looking forward to see you on Friday at 10am at the Mark hotel.
Here is a short background:
Andy Intrater is the CEO of Columbus Nova, a family office investing in North America on behalf of Viktor Vekselberg
My guess is that they had a few bad years, investment wise, but they regained Viktor's confidence and they are investing again.
Andy is Viktor's cousin and they have a very good personal relationship.
Viktor is selling his stake in the partnership with BP for about $7.5 billion in cash. In addition, he owns over 90% of Renova, his industrial holding company.
Selway, my company, is now operating out of their offices in the city and we have already made a number of investments together.
My suggestion for the meeting is to ask Andy to tell you about his activities and have a conversation about different ways we can work together.
I hope this is helpful,
Chag sameach,

Yaron Eitan
